

Doug Archer

Doug Archer wrote his first story about ghosts and zombies when he was eleven years old, the same age as the Cold Case Kids. He has loved writing about ghouls ever since.

A freelance writer, Doug started scribbling down notes for the Cold Case Kids Mysteries after one of his sons asked him if there had ever been pirates on the Great Lakes. Three years later, those notes turned into the first book in the Cold Case Kids Mystery series, Ghoul's Gold, a story about haunted lighthouses, a zombie, and a hunt for pirate treasure on Lake Huron's mysterious Chantry Island.

It didn't stop there. The success of Ghoul's Gold, and the positive response from readers to the Cold Case Kids and their zombie friend, led to three more books in the series: Legend of the Phantom Reaper, Dead Man's Tale, and the latest, Curse of the Island Creeper. Doug's not done yet, either. There are more phantoms and ghouls for the Cold Case Kids to deal with, so Doug is currently hard at work on the fifth book in the series...

Bailey Baldassari

Originating from Milton, Bailey has always seen the world in a different and wonderful light. This developed into a passion for writing at a young age, writing poetry for assemblies and coffee houses. Since moving to Grey Bruce 9 years ago after college she was blown away by the beauty of the area as she began to lay down her roots. She has since adapted a style of bringing a personality and voice to the world around us through a romantic lens. She currently resides in Owen Sound with her two cats, always on the lookout for her next inspiration.

Ryan Ball

Ryan Ball is a Canadian author and actor, originally from Port Elgin, Ontario. He began writing short stories in public school, and through his high school career, Ryan published stream-of-consciousness style poetry through non-profit publishing firms in the United States. Some of which he had won awards and Honorable Mentions for. Ryan continued to write stream-of-consciousness style poetry for years afterwards, though did not publish anything for twenty years.

In 2019, Ryan released Ginnie. A psychological thriller about a man investigating the death of a former friend, who unknown to him may be a target in a new killing spree. Hot Mess, the second book released, about an exotic dancer who gets mixed up in the criminal world. Home Sweet Home, Ryan's third book, about a man who takes over his grandparents' apple orchard with a supernatural history. Ryan then went back to his poetry roots and released Trials & Tribulations, a collection of autobiographical poems that had been written between 1997-2014. His latest work, The Cold Case of Jack Williams, takes place in Ryan's hometown of Port Elgin, where a teenager couple investigate a missing person from the 1970's. Ryan has also worked in film and television as an actor.

Whitney Belrose

My name is Whitney Belrose. I am 30 years old. Magyickxz is my first published novel, which I plan to make into a series later on. I have been writing stories all my life but only took it seriously as a profession after I graduated high school. I went to Sheridan College in Mississauga for Creative Writing and Publishing to learn more about the craft and become a better writer. I have been an avid reader and writer all my life, and I hope to pass that love of reading and writing on to my daughter when she becomes older.

Lyn Carlson

Lyn has always enjoyed writing, beginning with a national poetry prize in Grade 7 to an Honours Award in Grade 13 English Studies, and now, publishing her own collections. For Lyn, poetry instinctively expresses thoughts and personal truths, hopefully offering readers the comfort of knowing we all share in life's struggles. Her new release, "I had (the BEST) in mind...", debuts many new poems, including a proud and patriotic 10-page epic about Canada, alongside selected favorites from her previous books!

With family members who served in both World Wars, Lyn deeply values Remembrance—a theme reflected in her poetry and membership in the Royal Canadian Legion. An Owen Sound resident for many years, Lyn worked in administrative roles across Toronto and Niagara before happily returning to this area to be close to family and her Bruce Peninsula roots. She enjoys Scrabble, trivia, Wordle, and an eclectic range of music.

Edith Faye Chester

Edith Faye Chester is a passionate storyteller, mother of four, and grandmother to ten energetic grandchildren. A lifelong learner, Edith has always believed in making everyday tasks both fun and meaningful. Her journey as a parent inspired her to write resources for young families, offering practical yet creative solutions to some of parenting's most common challenges. Born and raised in Nigeria, West Africa, Edith later earned her General B.A. in Psychology from Wilfrid Laurier University in Kitchener, Ontario (1977). She continued to hone her craft through the Institute of Children's Literature in Connecticut (2014). Today, Edith calls Tiverton, Ontario home, where she enjoys writing, family life, and sharing her ideas with new generations of parents and children.

Her debut children's book, But I Just Can't Sleep! introduces "Floppsies," a unique bedtime routine built around playful animal movements that calm and relax children at the end of the day. Inspired by techniques she developed for her own children—and now used successfully with her grandchildren—Edith has created a bedtime tool that strengthens the parent-child bond while making the transition to sleep smoother and more joyful.

With warmth, wisdom, and experience, Edith invites families everywhere to flop, wiggle, and wave their way into sweeter dreams.

Anne Darling

Anne Darling lives in Markdale, sharing her house with the love of her life and her sweet pup, Luna. Nothing makes her happier than opening her laptop and spinning a tale. As a kid she always had her nose in a book. She couldn't wait to turn the page and find out what happened next. Did the boy get the girl? Did the cranky, over-worked detective solve the murder? So, turning her love of books into a career seemed like the perfect choice.

What genre makes her happy? That's simple...romance. Anne loves to write about all things romance like the one that got away, best friends that secretly love each other or maybe the second time around love. She loves any scenario that allows the reader a respite from the day to day.

Like Anne, everyone loves a great romance story with a happy ending, so she gives her readers exactly what they want. In her Inked Romance Series, she combines three things she loves, motorcycles, sexy men with tattoos and of course—happy-ever-afters.

Amy Darrell

Amy Darrell is an Owen Sound author whose writing is inspired by the remarkable animals who share her life and by themes of resilience, empathy, inclusion, and adventure. Her first children's book, Bumper: No Sight! No Sound! No Problem!, is inspired by her real-life dog, Bumper, who was born blind and deaf but has not let that stop him one bit. Through Bumper's story, Amy hopes to encourage children and families to think differently about disability, inclusion, resilience, and the abilities of animals and people who experience the world in different ways.

Amy lives on the outskirts of Owen Sound with her partner, Matt, and a wonderfully unconventional non-human family that includes Bumper, a stray kitten named Mulligan, whom Bumper insisted they adopt, and a blind African Grey parrot named Bruno. When she is not writing, Amy can often be found outdoors canoeing, hiking, biking, and cooing at small bugs and mushrooms.

Lesley Hallett and Sai Meloche

Lesley Hallett is an Owen Sound-based writer, retired music teacher, pianist, longtime music educator, and devoted cat lover. Her years working with children helped shape her belief in the importance of acceptance, belonging, and making room for people to be exactly who they are.

Her first children's book, Love Matters Most, uses the familiar world of cats and dogs to explore a simple idea: love may look different from one person to another, but its value is the same. Written as a gentle conversation starter for children, families, and classrooms, the story encourages curiosity and kindness rather than judgment.

The book was created in collaboration with illustrator Sai Meloche, an Owen Sound-raised artist whom Lesley first met many years ago when Sai was one of her music students. Their connection continued long beyond the classroom, and Love Matters Most became a true creative partnership. Sai's illustrations bring warmth, creativity, and another layer of meaning to the story, inviting readers to notice and celebrate the differences that make each character unique.

Sai now lives and creates in Toronto with her big orange cat, Paris, and will be returning to Owen Sound to join Lesley at the Local Author Book Fair.

Renn James

Each of us is shaped by the stories we live. Renn James is no exception. When her daughter was diagnosed with Childhood Onset Schizophrenia, Renn realized that stories could help make sense of a world turned completely upside down—stories to answer difficult questions, to explain abstract concepts, and to give us words when the right ones seem to desert us. Written and illustrated during time snatched from her work as a business owner, musician, and teacher, these stories helped Renn, her husband, and their children find their footing. While she never set out to write books to share with others, this accidental author hopes to inspire people through her work and foster deeper connections with the ones we love. A lifelong resident of Grey County, Renn is very pleased to be part of the OSNGUPL Local Author Book Fair.

D. McCall Johnston

Born and raised in Owen Sound I moved to Yellowknife. After 20 years in the Northwest Territories, where I worked for the GNWT, held 10 positions and lived in 4 communities and earned my CFP designation, I decided to return to my home and start a Financial Planning practice, retiring in 2011. I kept busy on our 50 acres near Waverly Heights and in 2000 we moved to a cottage in Oliphant while a new house was being constructed. With time on my hands, I decided to write a novel. It took 5 years but I published my first book, EXTERNALITIES, a year ago in August. It is a murder mystery which takes place in Toronto, Collingwood, Sauble Beach, Yellowknife, Vancouver, and Penticton.

Gloria Lee-Vojin

Gloria Lee-Vojin comes from a large family. She is the seventh child of ten children. Born in British Guiana (now known as Guyana),

As a teenager she moved to Toronto, Canada with her parents, one brother and three sisters.

Her first fulltime job was a telephone operator which meant she had to get used to working shift work. Gloria worked very hard to support her parents and younger siblings.

She enjoyed writing short stories for her two children. Gloria only attended church once in a blue moon but never did give up on praying. Years later, it was her mission to become closer to God. She was inspired to write short poems.

After retiring, Gloria and her husband Mark moved to a small farm. She continued to write poems and set them aside. After reading a few of her poems, her pastor encouraged her to get them published. Mark agreed.

By the grace of God, she now has four published books of Christian poetry, beautifully inspired for the most part by the Holy Spirit.

It is her prayer that her work will bring an awareness to many about God's love, grace, mercy, kindness and most of all His forgiveness of our sins.

Patrick Lima

For fifty-plus years Patrick Lima lived and gardened with his mate in a quiet corner of the Bruce Peninsula, where he was co-maker of Larkwhistle Garden, a lush acre of flowers, herbs, vegetables and fruit, all grown organically.

The author of scores of magazine articles 'back in the day', for such publications as Harrowsmith, Canadian Gardening and Toronto Life Gardening, he has also penned four best-selling gardening books including The Art of Perennial Gardening and The Organic Home Garden.

Having retired from both gardening and garden writing, and having relocated to Owen Sound, Lima now turns his hand to poetry, first publishing Tracks in the Snow, a volume of poems and essay with Ginger Press Books, and more recently The Circled Stream a book of thirty-three new poems.

Of The Circled Stream one reader says: "I spent a magnificent morning with your book, and experienced what I always hope for: a feeling of full life while reading, and a sense that life is a little different afterwards. You are easily one of my favorite contemporary poets."

From the start of his writing career, Lima has been praised — and enjoyed by thousands — for his 'casual conversational' and more recently for poems that have been characterized as 'very approachable'.

Marc Matei

Marc Matei is an independent artist that spends his professional life dedicated to designing fun and experimental art experiences for individuals with intellectual or developmental disabilities. Teaching creative expression has taught him that sometimes, the best way to deal with the tumultuous nature of everyday life, is to escape into an ethereal reality where the boundaries of imagination exceed all self-imposed limitations.

'My foray into writing began upon awakening from a dream in a fit of laughter, completely oblivious to the transgressive trip my subconscious had taken me on. The only remnant of this dream being one simple sentence - "So I decided to ruin Gerald's life." From that moment on I began crafting this positively absurd first novel ALLIES.

A thirty-month long process that took me into the deepest corners of the human psyche, saturated with the complexities of identity, and unraveling what it means for a broken man to become a hero.'

Susan McElroy

Susan McElroy lives in Grey County, Ontario, Canada. She and her husband, Bill, made the move to this part of the country in 2019. They were looking to get back to the rural roots of their childhood.

Surrounded by trees, and just steps from Georgian Bay, the area is secluded and quiet, the landscape stunning.

It's about perfect.

This is the setting in which Susan now writes. It's something she's been doing for about as long as she's been reading and that's quite a while. Books shaped her life and she recalls with great fondness the book box man. "His name was Argyle McGugan and while he has been gone from this plane for years, I can still see him carrying the book box into the school and placing it at the back of the room behind the stove. A rough wooden box, the width of a man, with a flat, hinged top that rattled and, when lifted, it revealed the world, full of possibilities and adventures. I loved the book box. (You should have seen me the first time I went to the library.)"

Over the years Susan has made her living by writing for others. Now she writes for herself. She's a writer and a poet. End of story.

Bill Monahan

Bill Monahan is a longtime writer, contributing to periodicals through the years, but this is his first published book. A resident of Meaford since 2009, he operates a service for homeowners related to home electronics and is an active participant in the local music community. In 2016 he founded the online publication, Meaford Live Music, documenting local concerts, artist profiles, and weekend event planners around the Meaford, Owen Sound, and Collingwood areas. He maintained the website through 2018, providing a valuable local source of information for local musicians and music fans. Prior to and after settling in the area, he has played in bands and solo and is an active member of Owen Sound's Georgian Shores Songwriters' Circle.

His involvement with musicians dates back to the 1980's, during which time he managed artists and founded an independent record label called Amatish Music, which released five projects through to 1996. Those adventures are chronicled in his memoir/history entitled Two Dollar Cover, the book that he will be demonstrating at the Authors' Fair.

Carol Neelands

Carol Neelands has resided in Grey County off and on since she was in her thirties when her first husband, Bruce Flett was Postmaster of Owen Sound. This is when she started her writing career, gaining inspiration from a night schoolteacher, Marilyn Gamble, who loved her writing style and her neighbor, Mark Thurman, who encouraged and advised her.

Her first book Susie's Story follows the life of a young Mennonite girl born and raised during the turmoil of the Russian Revolution. It is the true story of Carol's mother, written in the form of a Mennonite Romance. Two more Susie books followed. Then came a time of teaching in Northern Canada, the inspiration for the novel, Gang Trouble.

In 2014 Bruce succumbed to cancer, and in 2017 Carol married Hugh Neelands, a local singer. Together they visited nursing homes and various other events singing old favourites and gospel hymns and also organizing an open air Country Gospel Jamboree. After COVID hit Carol went back to writing. Her last two books, The Hugh Neelands Story and Susie, a Woman of Faith have both hit #1 on various categories of Amazon's Hot New Releases.

Zanne Raby

Zanne Raby writes at the edge of human endurance, exploring the survival of our species from the dawn of civilization to the farthest reaches of the stars.

A veteran of the Royal Canadian Air Force with 38 years of service, Zanne brings an authentic perspective to her fiction. Her military career informs the meticulous detail and complex leadership dynamics found in her epic sci-fi saga, The Chronicles of Deneb, a series steeped in interstellar politics, betrayal, and the resilience of the human spirit.

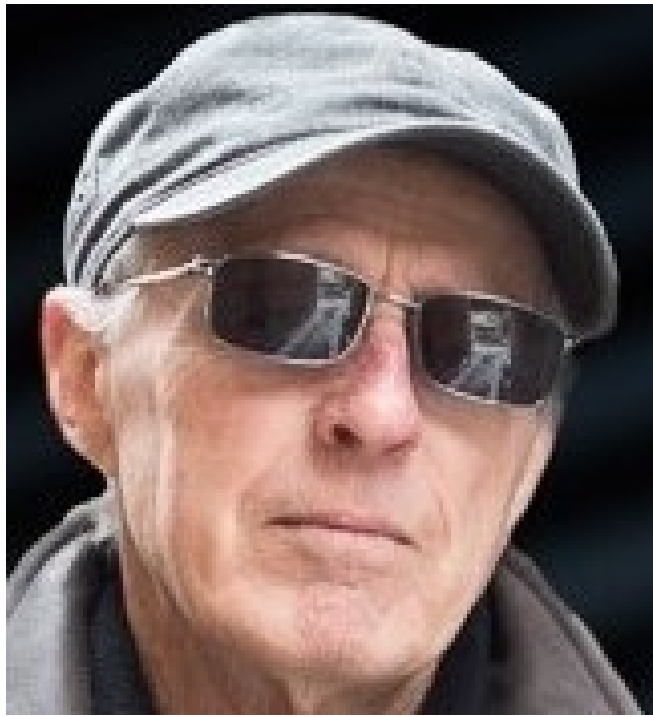

Zanne's fascination with the "turning points" of history led to her newest series, Frozen in Time. Shelter of Stones transports readers to the French Alps of 5200 BCE, where Stone Age hunter-gatherers confront the sweeping changes of the Neolithic revolution. The journey continues with Ice Angel, a sci-fi time-slip novel that bridges the ancient world with the future, proving that while technology advances, the storm of change remains a constant challenge.

Whether navigating a Space Ark through the Collective or following prehistoric footsteps through the Alps, Zanne writes with a veteran's eye for strategy and a storyteller's heart for heritage.

Rob Rolfe

Rob Rolfe is the author of seven books of poetry, one co-authored book of poetry and songs, and three poetry chapbooks. His writing has appeared in literary journals and poetry anthologies in Canada and the United States.

In addition to his work with Quattro Books, Aeolus House and The Ginger Press, Rob has created his own micro press, Little Mudtown. He has published one chapbook with Little Mudtown, a poetry and linocut collaboration with artist Jerry Silverberg, and several mini-books similar in format to “literatura de cordel” of northeast Brazil.

Rob has collaborated locally with other poets and musicians through performance work with the Métissage Collective, and with singer-songwriters Larry Jensen and Dave Hawkins as Two Singers and a Poet. Most recently, he has returned to performing as a music and poetry duo with Larry Jensen.

Born in London, Ontario, Rob was a union leader and librarian in Toronto for many years. His writing reflects his interest in people, places, the natural environment and issues of social justice. After moving to this area, he served as Owen Sound Poets Laureate, 2015-2017, with singer-songwriter Larry Jensen.

Alanna Rusnak

Alanna Rusnak was born in the wrong decade and dreams of abandoning everything to live in a van and travel across Canada. She'll call it "a book tour," but it's really an excuse to unleash her inner hippie.

A collector of typewriters and John Travolta VHS movies, she believes life is too short not to indulge in the things that bring you joy—which is exactly why she left a stuffy office job of eighteen years to launch a full-time indie press out of a chicken coop on her childhood property. It's since been renovated into a beautiful workspace, where she writes fiction and runs both the press and the award-winning Canadian literary arts magazine Blank Spaces.

An author of literary and speculative fiction, Alanna likes to play in dark spaces, but always leaves room for redemption.

Her debut novel was a finalist for the 2018 Kobo Emerging Writer Prize and named one of the top reader-recommended titles of 2017 by cbcbooks.ca

Settled in West Grey as a 4-year-old, it has always been her home and source of inspiration, and she's working hard to build bridges between the various arts communities. She has no immediate plans to abandon it—but she'll certainly leave it all behind the moment her husband gets on board with the van-life idea.

Allan Walker

There was a spark, it occurred when I was 7 or 8. I heard my dad singing with his brothers. I remember their playfulness. In the morning, records would be scattered all around the living room. I would pore over the artwork as I listened to songs over and over.

My cousin Bobby Walker was like a brother to me; he had no siblings. When we saw the Beatles on the Ed Sullivan show we were smitten. He got a guitar and amp for Christmas and I bought a guitar with my paper route money.

We found other fledgling musicians and began to rehearse. Having no training whatsoever we boldly proceeded one song at a time. We began playing small venues. It was bold but we were encouraged by the response. However my dad believed that playing music for a living was unrealistic. "You'll never make a living".

Agreeing on a backup plan I got a degree in photography/cinematography. One band evolved into another; I was playing music for a living. Eventually living in Toronto where I played the rock bar circuit.

My book fills in the details of my 55-year career with my memoirs and photographs.

Patti Waterfield

Patti Waterfield is both a self-taught artist, and a graduate of The Ontario College of Art and Design and the Central Technical School of Art, Toronto.

As a direct response to downsizing, Patti has shifted her focus from painting with oils on canvas to works on paper, adopting a more illustrative style. By using watercolours and ink, she is able to express herself in a more immediate method. She still works in a variety of mediums, including printmaking.

Patti is always exploring new ways to keep her art practice interesting. Her whimsical style lends itself to humorous narratives. She has made a series of Tunnel Books (3-D), and most recently ventured into making Zines reproducing her sketchbook pages to make Art Zines, and using her visual journals for her subject matter for the others. It is particularly through her Zines that she can express herself - how she feels about current changes in the world and a visual documentation of some of her daily experiences.

Patti has illustrated books for local authors, the books can be found locally at the Ginger Press and the Owen Sound & North Grey Union Public Library. She writes a Blog on Substack.

Her interest in the nature, the world and local events is very evident in her work.
