In May of 2006, former Chief Librarian Andrew Armitage wrote about the many local writers “whose books are coming off the press at an ever-accelerating rate. They are novelists, poets, travel writers, authors of young adult and children's books, cookbook writers, contributors to magazines, compilers of local lore, makers of memoirs and guidebooks, essayists, railways buffs, and historians. All of them have one thing in common - they are your neighbours.”
